AMIT BARUNA

Hasn't changed in 8 years.

01

The body is always adapting. Every symptom is a signal — what looks like resistance, fatigue, cravings, weight regain, or low motivation is often the body's attempt to protect itself under chronic stress, poor recovery, unstable energy, or physiological overload.

The goal is not to force change through more discipline. The goal is to restore the conditions that allow the body to adapt, recover, and change naturally.

02

Biology first. Behaviour second. Sustainable habits don't come from motivation. They come from a nervous system that feels safe enough to change. Fix the biology and the behaviour follows.

03

The right intervention is rarely what you think. It is almost never the diet. It is almost never the workout. It is whatever is upstream of everything else — and finding that is what I do.
